| The Art of Judging Others.                                                | A arte de julgar os outros.                                                 |
| There were two neighbors.                                                        | Eram dois vizinhos.                                                                |
| One of them bought a rabbit for his children.                                    | Um deles comprou um coelho para os filhos.                                         |
| The children of the other neighbor also wanted a pet.                            | Os filhos do outro vizinho também quiseram um animal de estimação.                 |
| So, the parents of this family bought a German Shepherd puppy.                   | E os pais desta família compraram um filhote de pastor alemão.                     |
| Then a conversation begins between the two neighbors:                            | Então começa uma conversa entre os dois vizinhos:                                  |
| "He's going to eat my rabbit!"                                                   | "Ele vai comer o meu coelho!"                                                      |
| "No way. My shepherd is a puppy. They will grow up together and become friends!" | "De jeito nenhum. O meu pastor é filhote. Vão crescer juntos e "pegar" amizade!!!" |
| And it seems that the dog owner was right.                                       | E, parece que o dono do cão tinha razão.                                           |
| They grew up together and became friends.                                        | Juntos cresceram e se tornaram amigos.                                             |
| It was normal to see the rabbit in the dog's yard and vice versa.                | Era normal ver o coelho no quintal do cachorro e vice-versa.                       |
| The children were happy with the two animals.                                    | As crianças, felizes com os dois animais.                                          |
| Then, the rabbit's owner went on a trip for the weekend with his family.         | Eis que o dono do coelho foi viajar no fim de semana com a família.                |
| They didn't take the rabbit.                                                     | E não levaram o coelho.                                                            |
| On Sunday afternoon, the dog's owner and his family                              | No domingo, à tarde, o dono do cachorro e a família                                |

| were having a snack peacefully when, suddenly, the German Shepherd comes in with the rabbit between his teeth, filthy, covered in dirt, and dead.                       | tomavam um lanche tranquilamente, quando, de repente, entra o pastor alemão com o coelho entre os dentes, imundo, sujo de terra e morto.                                    |
| The dog got a tremendous beating!                                                                                                                                       | O cão levou uma tremenda surra!                                                                                                                                             |
| They almost killed the dog from so much aggression.                                                                                                                     | Quase mataram o cachorro de tanto agredi-lo.                                                                                                                                |
| The man said: "The neighbor was right. It could only end like this!"                                                                                                    | Dizia o homem: "O vizinho estava certo. Só podia dar nisso!"                                                                                                                |
| A few more hours and the neighbors would arrive.                                                                                                                        | Mais algumas horas e os vizinhos iam chegar.                                                                                                                                |
| And now?!                                                                                                                                                               | E agora?!                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Everyone looked at each other.                                                                                                                                          | Todos se olhavam.                                                                                                                                                           |
| The poor dog, crying outside, licking his wounds.                                                                                                                       | O cachorro, coitado, chorando lá fora, lambendo os seus ferimentos.                                                                                                         |
| "Have you thought about how the children will react?"                                                                                                                   | "Já pensaram como vão ficar as crianças?"                                                                                                                                   |
| No one knows exactly who had the idea, but it seemed foolproof: "Let's wash the rabbit, make it clean, then we dry it with the hairdryer and put it back in its house." | Não se sabe exatamente quem teve a idéia, mas parecia infalível: "Vamos lavar o coelho, deixá-lo limpinho, depois a gente seca com o secador e o colocamos na sua casinha." |
| And so they did.                                                                                                                                                        | E assim fizeram.                                                                                                                                                            |
| They even put perfume on the little animal.                                                                                                                             | Até perfume colocaram no animalzinho.                                                                                                                                       |
| It looked beautiful.                                                                                                                                                    | Ficou lindo.                                                                                                                                                                |
| It seemed alive, the children said.                                                                                                                                     | Parecia vivo, diziam as crianças.                                                                                                                                           |
| Shortly after, they heard the neighbors arriving.                                                                                                                       | Logo depois ouvem os vizinhos chegarem.                                                                                                                                     |
| They noticed the children's screams.                                                                                                                                    | Notam os gritos das crianças.                                                                                                                                               |
| "They found out!"                                                                                                                                                       | "Descobriram!"                                                                                                                                                              |
| Not five minutes passed, and the rabbit's owner came knocking at the door, scared.                                                                                      | Não passaram cinco minutos e o dono do coelho veio bater à porta, assustado.                                                                                                |
| He looked like he had seen a ghost.                                                                                                                                     | Parecia que tinha visto um fantasma.                                                                                                                                        |
| "What happened?! Why that face?"                                                                                                                                        | "O que foi?! Que cara é essa?"                                                                                                                                              |
| "The rabbit, the rabbit..."                                                                                                                                             | "O coelho, o coelho..."                                                                                                                                                     |
| "What about the rabbit?"                                                                                                                                                | "O que tem o coelho?"                                                                                                                                                       |

| "Yes. Before we traveled, the children buried it in the backyard, and now it has reappeared!"                                                                           | "Foi. Antes de viajarmos, as crianças o enterraram no fundo do quintal e agora ele reapareceu!"                                                                             |
| The story ends here.                                                                                                                                                    | A história termina aqui.                                                                                                                                                    |
| What happened next is left to the imagination of each of us.                                                                                                            | O que aconteceu depois fica para a imaginação de cada um de nós.                                                                                                            |
| But the main character of this story, without a doubt, is the dog.                                                                                                      | Mas o grande personagem desta história, sem dúvida alguma, é o cachorro.                                                                                                    |
| Imagine the poor thing, since Friday looking in vain for his childhood friend.                                                                                          | Imagine o coitado, desde sexta-feira procurando em vão pelo seu amigo de infância.                                                                                          |

| After much sniffing, he discovers his friend rabbit dead and buried.                                                               | Depois de muito farejar, descobre seu amigo coelho morto e enterrado.                                                                        |
| What does he do?                                                                                                                   | O que faz ele?                                                                                                                               |
| Probably with a broken heart, he digs up his friend and goes to show his owners, imagining they could bring him back to life.      | Provavelmente com o coração partido, desenterro o amigo e vai mostrar para seus donos, imaginando que o fizessem ressuscitar.                |
| And humans continue to judge others...                                                                                             | E o ser humano continua julgando os outros...                                                                                                |
| Another lesson we can take from this story is that man has a tendency to judge facts without first verifying what really happened. | A outra lição que podemos tirar desta história é que o homem tem a tendência de julgar os fatos sem antes verificar o que de fato aconteceu. |
| How many times do we draw wrong conclusions from situations and think we are the owners of the truth?                              | Quantas vezes tiramos conclusões erradas das situações e nos achamos donos da verdade?                                                       |
| Stories like this are for us to think carefully about the attitudes we take.                                                       | Histórias como essa, são para pensarmos bem nas atitudes que tomamos.                                                                        |
| Sometimes, we do the same...                                                                                                       | Às vezes, fazemos o mesmo...                                                                                                                 |
| Life has four meanings: to love, to suffer, to fight, and to win.                                                                  | A vida tem quatro sentidos: amar, sofrer, lutar e vencer.                                                                                    |
| So: LOVE a lot, SUFFER a little, FIGHT a lot, and if possible... ALWAYS WIN!!!!                                                    | Então: AME muito, SOFRA pouco, LUTE bastante e se possível...VENÇA sempre!!!!                                                                |
